Menino and his driver play cops & robbers - for real.

Article from: The Boston Herald | March 15, 1997 | Ford, Beverly; Mulvihill, Maggie |Copyright

Mayor Thomas Menino became a traffic cop yesterday during a routine drive to the office when his fearless driver jumped from their car to help capture a suspected carjacker gone amok.

"It was a traffic jam and I had to do something. I didn't want people to be late for work," Menino said yesterday.

Detective Daniel Linskey, who drives for Menino, was en route to City Hall with the mayor when he spotted an attempted carjacking in progress and quickly went into action.

"We saw a man covered in blood stopping vehicles and attempting to break into vehicles," said Linskey. "He was sort of out of it. He thought people were following him and hiding behind trees. ..."

HUB POLICE SEIZE $26 MILLION IN COCAINE

In one of the largest drug busts in the city this year, Boston police raided a Roxbury home yesterday and seized 13 kilograms of cocaine.

With a photograph of a man wanted for murder in his hand and a search warrant in his pocket, Sergeant Detective Daniel Linskey knocked on the front door of a first-floor apartment on Brookledge Street in Grove Hall shortly before noon, and asked 54-year-old Robert Lee if he had seen the suspect.

Lee said he hadn't and wished the officers luck in their search. Then, Linskey said he pulled out the search warrant and entered the house with several officers. The cocaine, some of it already cooked into crack, was in Lee's bedroom, in a file cabinet and a hidden drawer of a nightstand, Linskey said at a news conference last night. ...

Menino has brush with gun violence Michele McPhee Boston Herald Police Bureau Chief

Wednesday, August 23, 2006 - Updated: 02:03 AM EST

Mayor Thomas M. Menino came within feet of an armed thug and heard cops yell the chilling words "He's got a gun!" during a walking tour of Dorchester Monday evening, learning firsthand the fright many of his constituents suffer in a city plagued daily by gunplay. "I saw this guy running past me in a black shirt. All the sudden, the police who were with me were running and chasing this individual," Menino said yesterday.

"This guy was brazen as hell," a calm and cool Menino told the Herald. "I don't know that this individual knew that the mayor was in the area, that there would be so many cops chasing him, but how brazen can you be?" Menino, along with acting Boston Police Commissioner Al Goslin, top BPD brass and City Hall aides, were meeting with residents of the Bowdoin/Geneva area, a known hotspot for shootings, about 7 p.m. The suspect, Adelino Monteiro, 19, ran past them with his hand pressed into his right hip, allegedly trying to hold his gun steady as he darted from the cops. After a foot chase down Draper Street, Monteiro allegedly pulled out a Colt .45 and held it up in "the area of his right ear, pointing skyward," according to a BPD report. Menino was about 10 feet from the loaded firearm when cops surrounded and corralled Monteiro in a yard, aides said.

Monteiro then allegedly hurled the weapon to the ground and threw himself over a fence, with Deputy Superintendent Dan Linskey - the BPD's second-in-command - right behind him. Linskey injured his right shoulder while arresting Monteiro and came to work yesterday wearing a sling.
